About the Conference

The CPCE Health Conference 2021 is the sixth annual international conference organised by The Hong Kong Polytechnic University's College of Professional and Continuing Education (CPCE) since 2016. The theme of this year's Conference is "Post-pandemic health and long-term care: A new paradigm". The COVID-19 pandemic is changing the world for more than a year and a half. All people are adapting to the "new normal" practices and behaviour, in addition to wearing a facial mask, hand hygiene and social distancing which are predominantly mandatory particularly in public venues. Health care has undergone drastic reform in terms of precautionary measures, especially in hospitals and during high-risk procedures. Human traffic and visits to health and residential care facilities have put on a nearly total halt, "neglecting" the usual pattern and empathy in patient care. Policy makers, public health officials and health professionals are encountering a very difficult time in human history from the COVID-19, the clinical and epidemiological nature of which are still not fully understood by the experts. The aim is to explore the emerging policy, practices and management of health care, including long-term care in the post-pandemic era.

Speakers

Prof. David BRIGGS AM

Adjunct Professor, Faculty of Medicine and Health, University of New England, Australia and Mahidol University Thailand
Editor, Asia Pacific Journal of Health Management
Immediate Past President, Society for Health Administration Programs in Education (SHAPE)

The need for authentic leadership in long-term care post pandemic: Australian perspectives

Prof. Briggs is Adjunct Professor at the Mahidol University of Thailand, and Editor of Asia Pacific Journal of Health Management. He is the Immediate Past President of Society for Health Administration Programs in Education (SHAPE). Prof. Briggs is Fellow, Life Member and Past National President of the Australasian College of Health Services Management (ACHSM) and Founding Fellow of the Hong Kong College of Health Service Executives. He was awarded the College gold medal for his contributions to health services and the NSW ACHSM Presidents Award 2014 for his extensive contributions to the College and to health services in NSW.

He has had extensive senior management and governance experience in the public health sector. His consultancy, research and publications include work in the health sector, most recently in PHC, in the Asia Pacific as well as Australia. Currently he is Deputy Chair, Director of a PHN network, HNECCPHN, a Director of DSB Consulting A/Asia P/L and chairs the Research, Innovation, Design and Planning Sub Committee. He is former Chair, New England Medicare Local, former Director, HealthWise P/L, and a former Director of North West Division of General Practice.

Prof. Briggs was previously Head of the Health Management Program at the University of New England and has taught across the range of course units in that program both domestically, and overseas at The Chinese University of Hong Kong. His research and publications interest focus on health policy, health reform, health systems management and the potential for distributed networks of practice in the delivery of primary health care. He has presented and published extensively in relation to his work in the Asia Pacific.

Prof. Tung-liang CHIANG

Professor and former Dean, College of Public Health, National Taiwan University

COVID-19 and long-term care in Taiwan: Impacts and challenges

Prof. Tung-liang Chiang is a Professor and former Dean of the College of Public Health, National Taiwan University. In 1984, he received his ScD in health policy and management from the Johns Hopkins University. Prof. Chiang is one of the three pioneer architects of Taiwan's National Health Insurance, which was inaugurated on 1 March 1995. In 2014-2016, he served as the Executive Director of the Higher Education Evaluation and Accreditation Council of Taiwan.

Prof. Chiang's research interest has focused on health care reforms and social determinants of health. Since 2003, he has been the principal investigator for the Taiwan Birth Cohort Study, following up a nationally representative sample of more than 20,000 babies born in 2005. Prof. Chiang has published extensively, including three recent edited books: Health Care System Reform and Policy Research in Taiwan (World Scientific Singapore, 2020), The Third Wave of National Health Insurance Reform in Taiwan (Taipei: Commonwealth Publishing, 2021), and Higher Education in Taiwan: Global, Political and Social Challenges and Future Trends (Springer Nature Singapore, 2021).

Prof. Ya-Mei CHEN

Associate Professor, College of Public Health, National Taiwan University

COVID-19 and long-term care in Taiwan: Impacts and challenges

Prof. Ya-Mei Chen is an Associate Professor at National Taiwan University in the College of Public Health's Institute of Health Policy and Management. Her research focuses on the development of long-term care policy and services for older adults in the U.S. and Asia. She devotes herself to preventing disabilities, supporting healthy ageing and ageing at home, and providing support to family members who care for loved ones with long-term care needs. Her current research projects include efforts to understand how time-varying factors such as exercise and leisure time activity interact with development of functional disability, assess how health behaviors and other factors may shape the relationship between socioeconomic status and functional disability, evaluate policies and services that support disabled older adults and family caregivers, and assess factors that contribute to a system of long-term care services that better supports disabled older adults and their family caregivers. At a time when ageing has become a global challenge, Prof. Chen dreams of finding win-win strategies for supporting older adults toward healthy ageing at home with their loved ones. Prof. Chen earned two master's degrees and a doctoral degree at the University of Washington in the United States and worked as a faculty member there before beginning her work at National Taiwan University. She is currently an editor of the Journal of Long-Term Care in Taiwan and Journal of Population and Gender Studies, and a consultant of the Senior Citizens' Institution Section in the Keelung City and the Department of Long-Term Care in the Ministry of Health and Welfare.
